Summer in the USA

April 21 - I've got the visa!

I'm going to work in the USA this summer! I got my J-1 Visa this morning. To get it, I had to prove I'm a full-time student. Then I had to choose a sponsor from a list. After that I filled in a form and took it to the embassy. And finally, I applied for some jobs. I got one as a waiter in a café in Boston. Now I just have to book my flights.

June 21 - Disaster!

When I got to the café, I was surprised to see it wasn't open for business. They were doing it up. The manager asked me to help paint the walls. I agreed. Unfortunately, it all went wrong. First, I knocked down the curtains and got white paint all over them. Then I broke a window with the ladder. The manager gave me a glass of water to calm me down. But when I put it down, it broke. He sacked me there and then. I lost my job before I'd even started working.

June 24 - New job!

Things are looking up. I've found another job, in a restaurant called AB Seafood. I'm working as a busboy, clearing and setting the tables and sweeping the floor. The working conditions are nothing to write home about: I only get paid the minimum wage and I don't get tips. Despite that, I love working here. I've got a nice room above the restaurant, my workmates are really friendly and the food is delicious.
